During the first quarter of 2022, five advocacy articles by colleagues were published by regional media outlets. Topics discussed included the necessity to reduce education disparities in pursuit of SDG 4 of the UN 2030 Agenda; the critical importance of women’s participation in regional ocean science and environmental recovery; the notable strides in learning made possible by the integration of mother-languages in school curricula; the importance of developing quality online content and pedagogy in higher education; and the potential in youth-led radio programming for challenging regional gender biases. UNESCO Bangkok also celebrated the completion of the first phase of an ongoing programme with Microsoft Thailand on upskilling the digital capacities of Thai workers, just as a call was sent out for nominations to the 2022 Asia-Pacific Awards for Cultural Heritage Conservation.
